

It crashes over me like waves from the ocean.

It pours over me like the sun warming you from a long winter.

It makes me yearn for it as a newborn yearns for its mother's breast.

It was a discovery I made some time ago.

It was and is a discovery I will forever be beholden of.

This discovery changed me, offering me things that I otherwise would not have had.

There are people that never have this.

For those people I pray – because I need this to live and can't imagine them not needing it too.

I want them to obtain it. I want them to taste the pleasures as I have and do.

It has offered me special gifts.

One of these gifts is free-spirited and leaves a pixie trail in his wake.

The other is earthly; beautiful and true, always offering things pleasantly.

But those are not the only gifts!

I have changed from a child-like thinker into a more cerebral 'ponderer'.

I have, because of it, transitioned from a nomad to a person with roots.

It crashes over me like the waves from the ocean, caressing the shore.

It makes me fall to my knees in awe of its beauty and power.

It fills my soul as though it is my life-force.

A Gift.

It is truly a gift.

God saw me, connected me, and helped me obtain it.

He knew I needed it.

He delivered it to me and He helps me keep it.

Without it, I would be a lost soul.

I would be forever searching for what it gives to me.

I would be forever searching because it is the only thing that makes me 'me'; makes me who I am.

The warmth is infectious.

It wraps its arms around me like the way water fills all voids into that in which it is poured.

The feelings are drug-like; a euphoric place that delivers me from pain, both mental and physical.

This discovery is the greatest gift.

There is nothing to compare it to.

This discovery has made me see reality and helped me through the most difficult of times.

It crashes over me like the waves from the ocean lapping against the shore.

Its blue water, tropical in its beauty, washes me and warms me and makes me whole.

It is my dream fulfilled, wrapped in a beautiful package that takes my mind to places that only lovers go.

This discovery was our love.

Your crystal gaze, from your green eyes, delivers it to me in unending quantities.

You incredible touch reassures me that this discovery will not leave.

The waves from the ocean will forever crash upon the shore.

My discovery, our love, will forever make me whole.

My love for you has no ending. It, like those waves, will last forever.
